Craig Philip is the President and CEO of Ingram Barge Company, one of the nation's largest domestic marine businesses. He has had a life-long passion for transportation that began as an undergraduate engineer at Princeton followed by a PhD at MIT in the 1970's. His career has focused on how rapid changes in telecommunications and computing technologies and deregulation of freight transport, converged on this centuries old, but still essential, segment of the nation's economy. In addition, to his more than 20 years with Ingram, Craig worked for Conrail and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Craig has been active in the industry and served in leadership positions with the American Waterways Operators, the National Waterways Conference, the Transportation Research Board, the Marine Board, and the first Federal Marine Transportation Advisory Council.

Today, Craig is providing support for mariners through service on the Boards of the Seamen's Church Institute, the Coast Guard Foundation, and industry advisory committees at Northwestern, Princeton, Vanderbilt and the University of Denver. He also serves on the boards of several nonprofit organizations in Middle Tennessee, including the Red Cross, The Tennessee Repertory Theatre, Youth Life Learning Centers, and Franklin Road Academy.
